Union Spokesmen Reject Bus Report

By DON VIPOND

The suggestion that Vancouver Island is threatened by a second bus strike was rejected by a union spokesman in Vancouver today.

"We're nowhere near that stage yet," said Frank Collins, business manager for the Amalgamated Transit Union.

The union represents 160 drivers for Pacific Stage Lines. the Vancouver firm which splits bus runs between Victoria and Vancouver with the Victoriabased Vancouver Island Coach

About 100 drivers for VICL went on strike for higher wages Thursday night.

The Pacific Stage Lines drivers are meeting Friday to vote on a contract offer. Collins declined to reveal terms of the offer or what the drivers are

The story suggesting a second bus strike threatened appeared in the Colonist today. Collins said he did not know where the paper got its information but it wasn't from him.

DENIES KNOWLEDGE

Joe Simpson, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Trans-port and General Workers, port and General Workers, which represents the Vancouver Island Coach Lines drivers, also said the story did not come from him.

That has nothing to do with us. We don't know anything about it;" he said of contract talks involving Pacific Stage Lines drivers.

Both sides in the VICL strike have indicated they are ready to continue talks but none are scheduled.

The drivers now get $3.48 hourly and want the $3.86 an hour cement truck drivers get. They say the company has offered this in the first year of a two-year contract offer but only 10 cents an hour more in the second year.

General manager Robert Horner has said that a 50minutes-a-shift bonus clause means drivers are actually getting $3.88 hourly and the company's offer would keep highest paid bus drivers in Canada.

The union denies this, claim-ing bus drivers in Montreal are

LONDON (AP) - A political storm blew up today over what appeared to be a calculated snub to Home Secretary James Callaghan, often regarded as Prime Minister Wilson's principal rival within the troubled Labor government.

The apparent snub came when Wilson met with his new-ly-constituted "inner cabinet" of top ministers. Callaghan was not present although he was known to be sitting in his office 100 yards away.

There was considerable uncertainty as to just what had a strong opponent of the governpush through anti-strike legislation during this session of Par-liament. Callaghan even went so far as to vote against the gov ernment at a meeting of the Labor party's national executive committee on the issue.

There was a possibility that Callaghan did not attend today's meeting by his own decision but aides denied this.

FOR ROLE IN VIET

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — UN officials are making contingency plans to provide international super-vision of a withdrawal of foreign troops from Vietnam, informed sources said today.

The sources were reacting to a statement from Secretary-General U Thant Monday that if requested by the parties involved "the United Nations could and should play a role in the implementation of any agreement reached."

A spokesman for Thant said this could cover the international supervision of a U.S. troop withdrawal called for in a 10-point peace plan presented in Paris Thursday by the Viet Cong.

The sources pointed out Thant's statement also left open the possibility of UN supervision of elections. though this was not mentioned in the Viet Cong plan.

"The Good Life" turned out pretty tough for movie mogul W. A. C. Bennett and his A. C. Bennett and his dreams of stardom.

It was learned Monday the premier had been demoted from self-cast star to bit player in an effort to save the $50,000 government film which bombed out at the box office, as they say in showbiz.

The revelation didn't come in a government announcement but in a coy Hollywoodish post mortem outside the eabinet chamber.

Premier Bennett told reporters at first only that certain "adjustments" had been found necessary soon after he proudly unveiled the film in a "premier's pre-miere" screening to a Social Credit meeting in his home-town of Kelowna.

TWO APPEARANCES

After more questions and the reluctant answers, it turned out that the "adjustments" involved cutting the premier's original seven ap-pearances in the 27-minute film down to a mere two.

(Most of his appearances in the film were to boast about his administration's policies, accompanied by the sound of canned cheers and appliause.)

The Weather and You By CARL RIBLET JR.

The police and city governments are now once again worrying about the weather due in July and August; not whether it will rain too much or bring on awful heat waves, but how people will behave when the thermometer boils. The expression "a long, hot summer" is related in official minds with city riots. The reason there are few if any riots in winter is that riots choose the midsummer days and those who may join in rioting then are more likely to have more steam to blow off. Resentment just naturally flares up when it's hot. If you live in the city, you know how the heat can come down on your apartment. Our tempers are bound to suffer

The Pendulums

A with the problems of Vietnam and race, plus the onslaught of final examinations and the advent of vacation time, have spared Canadian campuses the extremes of violence that have racked many United States university communities. It was a sorry day for higher education when students brandished guns on campus, destroyed valuable property and scholastic work, insulted and manhandled teachers, and engaged in bloody clashes with other students.

What had begun as a well meant student protest against militarism, academic shortcomings, injustices and over-entrenched establishmentarianism took on the more dangerous tones of anarchy, and destruction for its own sake. Appeasement encouraged the movement; for a time university authorities appeared unable to cope with the rebellion, unable to direct it, unable to offer an alternative.

The result could have been foretold. While to a point the revolutionary elements stirred up the university situation in a way that could produce some needed reforms, the extremists eventually aroused an equal and opposite reaction. The trend in recent days in the United States has been toward increasing control of the campuses, a harder line on law-breakers, and the emergence of forces which traditionally have questioned higher education and the state's responsibility to provide it.

As columnist James Reston puts it, events are "following the usual political scenario of violent action and extreme reaction. The odd thing is that the young militants who claim to know so much about human LESSER INVOLVEMENT psychology and political tactics provoked such a predictable reaction."

Exactly the same process, of course, could work to the advantage of the militants. Too far a swing to university restrictions would have an inevitable reaction, and the forces of repression would themselves spell their own defeat by driving campus moderates into the extremists' camp. But it must be the moderates among both administrators and students-who in the end will prevail. Out of the turmoil should come some worthy reforms in administration of universities, a broadening of the field of interests, a new spark of student involvement in academic achievement to match political interests, and-above all- the re-establishment of high standards of education without which the whole university process must deteriorate.

If such gains emerge from the current struggle then the loss of a term or two of some student's time, the loss of a good teacher here and there, may prove worth the cost. But the period of suspension cannot be overly prolonged or other forces will move to fill the vacuum. Industry and other pursuits may draw off academic intellects to the point of endangering the university; potential students will be deterred from applying for entrance. And this would be serious, for the modern industrial, scientific and social mechanism which man has fashioned cannot sustain, without great damage, an interruption in the flow of trained and educated young men and women to keep the complicated wheels turning. Nor can the world we are fashioning be successfully survived by the individual without the aid of background education in the twentieth century environment.

Paying the Price

the lesson being learned, or about to mains firmly in favor of reversion be learned, by the people of Okinawa and the other Ryukyu Islands in the Pacific. The islands have been under the jurisdiction of the United States since the end of the Second World War, when they were taken away from Japan. Now the Japanese, urged on by the Ryukyuans, are seeking to get them back.

Washington has tentatively agreed to the reversion and a formal treaty is expected to be negotiated soon. The problem is that over the past 25 years Okinawa has developed a hothouse economy that is built almost entirely on the U.S. military industry. Last year the Pentagon spent almost $250 millions in Okinawa, which is half of the Ryukyus' gross national product. The U.S. employs 53,000 persons directly, out of a total population of just under one million, and most of the others are dependent indirectly on military ex-

Today they are enjoying the fruits of relative affluence; tomorrow is uncertain. The attitude of the Ryukyuans may be just another small example of a growing awareness in the 20th century: prosperityis not an end in itself. The Pruning Knife After Bad Guesses continuing inflation has served notice that the government will shortly be a n nouncing further expenditure cuts. He said on Thursday that they would be very severe and that they would hurt different vested interests. This presumably means that Mr. Benson, who is expected to present a f inancial statement later this month, has once again seen his forecasts mangled by untoward events.

The flurry in the House was set off by a DBS report on the consumer price index. This showed a one-month advance of 1.1 per cent which means that prices, advancing on a broad front, are 4.4 per cent higher than in April of last year. In his budget speech of Oct. 22, Mr. Benson said that the increase for 1968 would be about 31/2 per cent, representing a "modest improvement" and that "somewhat better price performance" was anticipated for 1969. As of now, things have not improved; they have manifestly got worse.

It was precisely the need for greater price stability which dictated the fiscal strategy set out by Mr. Benson in the October budget. "We have reached the conclusion," he said, "that we must raise substantially more revenues in order to bring the budget into balance in 1969-70." By a variety of changes, by juggling the corporation tax (advancing the date of payment) and by introducing a new "social development" surtax, the minister hoped to increase his revenues by $845 million and to bring the budget at last into balance.

Only last week in a speech at Kingston, Ont., Mr. Benson reiterated this budget goal.

Insufficient

Evidently, however, the changes already announced by the minister are not sufficient in themselves to achieve this objective. Last year it was a failure to control expenditures (in particular the unexpectedly high costs of shared programs) which wrecked the calcula-

From the prime minister's remarks on Thursday, it appears that the threat now developing is again on the expenditure side

In outlining policy last October, Mr., Benson did emphasize the importance of continuing severe restraint on direct expenditure programs within the government's control, of resisting demands for higher spending and maintaining a "virtual freeze" on the size of the public service. But it appears to be the implication of Mr. Trudeau's remarks that the government must not merely questions in Parliament about order to solve the budgetary problem.

The failure to control prices over the past two years can scarcely be attributed to faulty diagnosis on the part of the ministers. Mr. Sharp, for example, clearly recognized the dangers inherent in the development of an inflationary psychology in the country. But the record does seem to show that corrective policies have been too little and too late; that they have been pursued with insufficient determination; and that, in spite of warnings over the years by Mr. Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada, the government has placed altogether too much reliance in monetary as opposed to fiscal policy.

Inflation Habit

Although interest rates at the moment are extremely high, they have not served to deter spending. On the contrary, a spring survey of consumer buying intentions carried out for an eastern financial paper suggests that a new surge is under way. Having lived with inflation, people expect more inflation and buy in anticipation of higher prices

In respect to the control of expenditures, the government's performance has simply not carried conviction. Periodically we have had resounding declarations but the results have been anticlimactic. Last year Mr. Benson was the

THE prime minister in reply to "continue" but must bite more deeply in star of the show. He gave Parliament a guestions in Parliament about order to solve the budgetary problem. grim recital of the butchery said to be occurring in the various departments and guaranteed a balanced budget. But the guarantee went with the leaves of autumn, and we had some more welladvertised cuts accompanied by new taxes. There is now apparently to be another attempt to impress the public. It will be no easy task because in these matters too one must reckon with a law of diminishing returns.

Scepticism

Furthermore, government economies and government extravagance so frequently go hand in hand as to arouse scepticism not only in the general community but probably in the public service as well. What is gained from the standpoint of credibility by cutting out a project is lost when word gets out (as it is bound to do) that money is being spent lavishly on refurnishing ministerial offices or senate committee rooms or that very large increases have been promised to senior civil servants.

In the face of the latest disturbing reports from the price front, Mr. Trudeau is entirely right in emphasizing economy in government and moderation in wage settlements. But it has to be proved that the government means business and this certainly will not be made easier by a two-year record of half or false starts.

Legal Forum

May I first express my pleasure in being able to participate in the recent legal forum co-sponsored by the Victoria Daily Times and radio station CJVI. I feel that this is a worthwhile community endeavour and believe that it is a useful means of assisting the public, in regard to legal problems.

However, I have received some adverse comments in connection with the report of the proceedings contained in the Times on May 1, One of the questions that I had to answer was "What responsibility do parents have for the acts of an 18-year-old child no longer living at home?" The report in your paper states as follows:

"Cecil Branson says parents are responsible if the boy or girl commits damage to the property, injures another party or incurs debts. 'You cannot escape liability for the acts of a minor'.

The above is not the law and I was very surprised to see it stated that I had alleged that it was. I have therefore taken the liberty of checking with centain tapes that were made of the broadcast to ascertain what it was that I actually said. The tapes show that I gave the

"There can be two different acts or kinds of acts that could be referred to in that question. The questioner could have had in his or her mind what we know as tort or negligent acts and the simple answer would be that you would not be responsible for the negligent acts of an 18-year-old no longer living at home. There are certain circumstances under which you could find yourself responsible for those acts - for instance, if you had a son who had a great propensity for shooting at things with a B.B. gun and you went out and bought him a more high powered air rifle and he shot someone's eye well then you might find yourself responsible.

"The other type of responsibility for which a parent may find himself liable for the acts of a child would be for his contractual obligations and you might find yourself responsible for the necessaries for your child. You still have to supply him with board and food and whatnot and under those circumstances you might find yourself liable."

As you can see from the above, I did not at any time make the statement alleged to me as a direct quote:

"You cannot escape liability for the acts of a minor." - Cecil O. D. Branson Soka Gakkai was founded almost 40 years ago as a lay movement to promote Nichiren Buddhism but never gained much esteem until prewar and wartime nationalism were discredited and the U.S. occupation ended. When it formed Komeito and began to zoom in influence, many American experts on Japan dismissed it contemptuously.

Yet Buddhism as a philosophical influence and Buddhism's political reflections have frequently been misunder stood by Westerners. They prefer to regard the former as invariably nonviolent and peaceful and the latter as rare aberrations. Buddhism, however, whose half-billion adherents have as many sectarian divisions as Christianity, has and nationalism in Vietnam and Japan.

Against this background the still modest influence of Soka Gakkai seems possibly more traditional than aberrational. Although it ultimately aims at making the Nichiren sect Japan's state religion, its precise aspirations have hitherto been expressed in Boy Scout terms designed to attract voters to its Komeito ("clean government") party.

Contemporary Appeal

The movement has special contemporary appeal by emphasizing youth in a land where age is still venerated and most parliamentarians in the large Liberal Democrat and Socialist parties are around 60. Kometto deputies are nearly a generation younger and their party offers a chance to those who feel held up in other channels. Japan's postwar generation hasn't yet come into its own

Soka Gakkai solicits support with neo-Socialist slogans, attacks on corruption, opposition to extreme wealth, a kind of neutralism, and specific condemnation of the Liberal Democrats for being pro-American, of the Socialists for being pro-Russian or pro-Chinese. It cleverly advertises itself as being exclusively pro-Animals were also Japanese, assuming Buddhism's old local-

Meanwhile, a new era is approaching in Japan's history. The old Liberal Democrat leadership is slowly fraying. Its hold on farmers, maintained by supporting artificially high rice prices, becomes ragged as the Japanese turn to new eating habits. While the Liberal Democrats extol the American security treaty and are prepared to continue unpopular bases if Washington will only yield sovereignty of Okinawa, the Socialists (depending on which faction) proclaim total faith in Soviet or Chinese

Middle Position

Soka Gakkai has pragmatically sought a middle position, drawing up a list of 53 of the 148 U.S. military installations which it believes can be shut down or reduced - without denouncing the security treaty. And Soka Gakkall missionaries convert recruits while Komeito wardheelers expound messianic schemes for brave new Japan.

This combination of holy roller faith with nationalist neutralism continues to accumulate support. Frustrated young petity bourgeois who have received an education but entertain scant hopes for successful careers, like the idea of being asked to work for a "third civilization" higher than either capitalism or Marxism. This odd movement hasn't attained

The recent events at Harvard are the culmination of a long year of unprecedented student unrest in the advanced nations of the world.

We have learned to expect students in underdeveloped countries to lead unruly demonstrations against the status quo, but what is new, unexpected and upsetting to many is that an apparently similar mood is sweeping across America, France, Germany, Italy and even Eastern European nations like Czechoslovakia and Poland.

Furthermore, the revolts occur, not at the most backward universities, but at the most distinguished, liberal and enlightened -Berkeley, the Sorbonne, Tokyo, Columbia, the Free University of Berlin, Rome and now Harvard.

This development has taken almost everyone by surprise. The public is clearly puzzled, frightened and often outraged by the behavior of its most privileged youth.

The scholarly world, including many who have devoted their lives to the study of student protest, has been caught off guard as

'Can't Happen Here'

For many years, analysts of student movements have been busy demonstrating that "it can't happen here."

Student political activity abroad has been en as a reaction to modernization, industrialization and the demise of traditional

In an already modern, industrialized, tribalized and "stable" nation like nation America, it was argued, student protests are naturally absent.

Another explanation has tied student protests abroad to bad living conditions in some universities and to the unemployability of their graduates.

Student revolts, it was argued, spring artly from the misery of student life in partly from the misery countries like India and Indonesia. Students who must live in penury and squalor naturally turn against their universities and

And if, as in many developing nations, hundreds of thousands of university graduates can find no work commensurate with their skills, the chances for student militancy are further increased.

These arguments helped explain the "silent generation" of the nineteen-fifties and sence of protest, during that period, in American universities, where students are often "indulged" with good living conditions, close student-faculty contact and considerable freedom of speech.

And they helped explain why "super-

The North American university student would seem to be enjoying the best of all worlds. What, then, is bothering him? Psychologist Kenneth Keniston suggests the underlying cause of the campus uprisings is a growing awareness that affluence by itself is not enough because it does not satisfy man's real aspirations. This is the first of a series of articles based on an essay he wrote for the New York Times Magazine.

employable" American college graduates especially the much-sought-after ones from colleges like Columbia and Harvard, seemed so contented with their lot.

But such arguments do not help us understand today's noisy, angry and militant students in the advanced countries.

Nor do they explain why students who enjoy the greatest advantages - those at the leading universities - are often found in the

As a result, several new interpretations of student protest are currently being put forward, interpretations that ultimately form part of what Richard Poirier has termed 'the war against the young."

Many reactions to student unrest, of course spring primarily from fear, anger, confusion or envy, rather than from theoretical analysis. Governor Wallace's attacks on student "anarchists" and other "pin-headed intellectuals", for example, were hardly coherent explanations of protest.

Many of the bills aimed at punishing udent protesters being proposed in Congress and state legislatures reflect similar

Moral Condemnation

Similarly, the presumption that student unrest must be part of an international conspiracy is based on emotion rather than Even George F. Kennan's recent discussion of the American student left is essentially a moral condemnation of "revolting students," rather than an effort to explain their behavior.

If we turn to more thoughtful analyses of the current student mood we find two general theories gaining widespread acceptance.

The first, articulately expressed by Lewis

S. Feuer in his recent book on student movements, "The Conflict of Generations," might be termed the "Oedipal Rebellion" interpretation.

The second, cogently stated by Zbigniew Brzezinski and Daniel Bell, can be called the theory of "Historical Irrelevance."

The explanation of Oedipal Rebellion sees the underlying force in all student revolts as blind, unconscious Oedipal hatred of fathers and the older generation.

Feuer, for example, finds in all student movements an inevitable tendency toward violence and a combination of parricide and suicide."

A decline in respect for the authority of the older generation is needed to trigger a student movement, but the force behind it comes from "obscure" and "unconscious forces in the child's early life, including both intense death wishes against his father and the enormous guilt and self-hatred that such wishes inspire in the child.

The idealism of student movements is thus, in many respects, only a "front" for the latent unconscious destructiveness and selfdestructiveness of underlying motivations.

Even the expressed desire of these movements to help the poor and exploited is explained psychoanalytically by Feuer: Sympathy for the disadvantaged is traced to 'traumatic" encounters with parental bigotry in the students' childhoods, when their parents forbade them to play with children of other races or lower social classes.

Bad Psychoanalysis

The identification of today's new left with blacks is thus interpreted as an unconscious effort to "abreact and undo this original

There are two basic problems with the Oedipal Rebellion theory, however. First, although it uses psychoanalytic terms, it is bad psychoanalysis.

The real psychoanalytic account insists that the Oedipus complex is universal in all normally developing children. To point to this complex in explaining student rebellion is, therefore, like pointing to the fact that all children learn to walk.

Since both characteristics are said to be universal, neither helps us understand why, at some historical moments, students are restive and rebellious, while at others they

Second, the theory does not help us explain why some students (especially those from middle-class, affluent and idealistic families) are most inclined to rebel, while others (especially those from working-class and deprived families) are less so.

In order really to explain anything, the Oedipal Rebellion hypothesis would have to be modified to point to an unusually severe Oedipus complex, involving especially intense and unresolved unconscious feelings of fatherhatred in student rebels.

But much is now known about the lives and backgrounds of these rebels — at least those in the United States — and this evidence does not support even the modified

On the contrary, it indicates that most

POLITICAL SCIENCE lecturer Standey Gray (centre) looks over heads masses of students protesting student protesters are relatively close to their parents, that the values they profess are usually the ones they learned at the family dinner table, and that their parents tend to be highly educated. liberal or leftwing and politically active.

Furthermore, psychological studies of student radicals indicate that they are no more neurotic, suicidal, enraged or disturbed than are non-radicals.

Indeed, most studies find them to be rather more integrated, self-accepting and 'advanced," in a psychological sense, than their politically inactive contemporaries. In general, research on American student rebels supports a "Generational Solidarity" (or chip-off-the-old-block) theory, rather than one of Oedipal Rebellion.

The second theory of student revolts now being advanced asserts that they are a reaction against "historical irrelevance." Rebellion springs from the unconscious awareness of some students that society has left them and their values behind. According to this view, the ultimate causes of student dissent are sociological rather than psychological.

Fundamental Changes

They lie in fundamental changes in the of the advanced societies especially, in the change from industrial to post-industrial society. The student revolution is seen not as a true revolution, but as a counterrevolution - what Daniel Bell has called "the guttering last gasp of a romanticism soured by rancor and

This theory assumes that we are moving rapidly into a new age in which technology will dominate, an age whose real rulers will be men like computer experts, systems analysts and technobureaucrats.

Students who are attached to outmoded and obsolescent values like humanism and romanticism unconsciously feel they have no place in this post-industrial world.

When they rebel they are like the Luddites

McGill University administration's decision to oust him as result of role in leading campus demonstrations.

of the past - workers who smashed machines to protest the inevitable industrial revolution.

Today's student revolt reflects what Brzezinski terms "an unconscious realization that they (the rebels) are themselves becoming historically obsolete"; it is nothing but the "death rattle of the historical irrelevants."

Can't Predict Future

This theory is also inadequate. It assumes that the shape of the future is already technologically determined, and that proteststudents unconsciously "know" will offer them no real reward, honor or

But the idea that the future can be accurately predicted is open to fundamental objection.

Every past attempt at prophecy has turned out to be grievously incorrect.

Extrapolations from the past, while sometimes useful in the short run, are usually fundamentally wrong in the long run, especially when they attempt to predict the quality of human life, the nature of political and social organization, international relations or the shape of future culture.

The future is, of course, made by men. Technology is not an inevitable master of man and history, but merely provides the possibility of applying scientic knowledge to specific problems.

Men may identify with it or refuse to, use it or be used by it for good or evil, apply it humanely or destructively.

Thus, there is no real evidence that student protest will emerge as the "death rattle of the historical irrelevants."

It could equally well be the "first spark of a new historical era."

No one today can be sure of the outcome, and people who feel certain that the future will bring the obsolescence and death of those whom they dislike, are often merely expressing their fond hope.

Snow White and the Squares (2)

We saw yesterday how a beautiful girl named Snow her cruel m other, the queen; and how a soldier was supposed kill her, but instead Rosedale, and how she with kids who little 👗 🛭 themselves were on the lam from cruel mothers.

One boy told Snow White, "My old lady was horrible, always snatching my comics away and making me read a book about some cruddy elephant named Babar."

A girl said, "That's nothing, mine refused to write notes to the school for me when I felt like goofing off and going to the movies.

Another boy said, "My nother doesn't care about me; all she ever does is sit with a drink in her hand and chumble away to herself as she watches the Galloping Gourmet."

By RICHARD NEEDHAM

Another girl said, "She was always after me to make my bed and clean my fingernails and wear shoes and all that garbage.

White asked, "But where do you live?", whereon the kids pointed to a nearby house with a For Sale sign on it. "That's our crash pad," they told her; and when she entered it, she found they had told the truth.

deep in empty pop bottles, dog-eared copies of Mad, chocolate bar wrappers, rollerskates, wet cigar butts, live turtles, dead hamsters, galoshes and half-eaten hot dogs. It looked like Toronto harbor and smelled like the Riverdale Zoo.

Afer a few days with the kids, Snow White couldn't take it any longer. She said, "I have a bright idea. Let's clean up this place and have proper beds instead of filthy old mattresses, and I will buy each of you your very own very own little towel, and we'll set up a schoolroom in the basement and play educa-tional games," at which the children scowled, saying after she had left:

"So she wants to be our little mother, heh? That settles it; she must go. Snow White, my foot, Snow Blight is more like it. Let's do her in with a broken ketchup bottle Better still, let's write the wicked queen, and tell her The floor was several feet Snow White is still alive, and hiding with us. That should do the trick."

When the queen got the lefter, she showed up in heavy disguise to give Snow White a poisoned popsicle, which the girl accepted and ate, afterwards falling into a sleep so heavy that her snores were heard all the way to Mildewed

> The seven children were pleased at first, then alarmed, and finally went down to see Rasputin J. Novgorod, who bought pop and chips for all of them, then said, "This case is a common one women are asleep all their lives; what they need to awaken them is a kiss from a first-class man.'

The kids asked, "But where will we find a first-class man?" Novgorod answered, 'There are none. All men are 19th-class excepting me, and I am in the 187th classification Isn't that right, Lindy?" which his secretary said "Ja, da, si, oui, igen, jawohl

As the kids started to blubber, the old man relented, saying, "Why don't you consult that crummy which started all this trouble in the first place? I will make up a little song which you can sing to it."

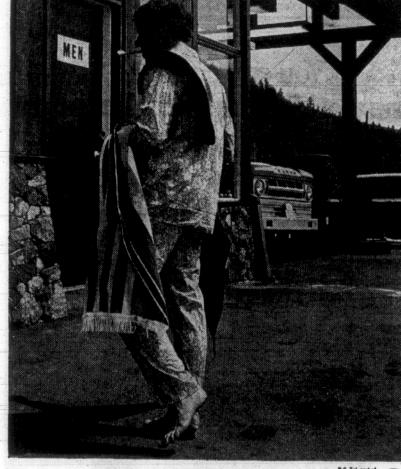

Sneaking into the royal castle, the children found the magic mirror and chanted the song, which went thus and as follows: "Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is the rarest of them all? A first-class man so we've been told, with nerves of steel and heart of gold; if such a man should be around, pray tell us where he

The mirror answered. "I myself used to be a first-class man until an evil old fairy turned me into a mirror. But your song has broken the spell," and the mirror turned into a handsome, well-mannered youth.

One kiss from him, and Snow White awoke, saying, "Oh, good heavens, it is like picturebook story. 1 suppose you and I will now enter the state of holy bed-lock, and we will live in Napanee ever after," to which the young man replied, "Well, it is not quite so simple as that. First-class men have a way of being, er, attached in various directions; and the best I can offer you is lunch on April 23, 1971. There will of course, be several other delightful young ladies along

So our story ends. And the seven kids? Oh, they joined Novgorod's entourage and spend all their time storming public and high schools from Port Geritol, N.S., to Squeamish. B.C.

Everybody remarks how well-behaved they are, and asks Novgorod how he does it, at which he laughs and says, "Oh, it's easy; just one peep, and I threaten to send them back to their mothers."

Teeners Talk to Adults— And Suddenly Gaps Shrink

The teen-agers talked and the adults listened Monday

And as the evening wore on, what had appeared as a generation gap became a communications gap-and nearly became no gap at all.

Gathered informally in the Saanich council chamber were a dozen students from Mount View and Mount Douglas high schools, council members, several policemen, some members of the Saanich Chamber of Commerce, senior municipal officials and three reporters.

They watched the National Film Board movie Flowers on a One-Way Street, about Yorkville hippies and their problems with Toronto city Anglican priest youth worker Walter Donald acted as moderator.

At the end of the 21/2-hour session, Donald asked youths what was accomplished.

"That what we said will be repeated in the press," said "That's the only way it's going to get out."

Another said: "I was surprised when I got a personal mayor. I didn't think he really cared about me."

And another said simply: "The letter had my name and address on it.

One student said she expected to meet "a bunch of old fuddy - duddies. This generation gap has really gone now."

"It's not a generation gap but a personality gap," replied another.

One of the best answers was the simple "yes" from several students when Donald asked fears of adults had been dissipated by the discussion. Indications were that more meetings would be held, and that fresh impetus would be given Ald. Alan Newberry's

Our old name didn't fit, so we picked a new one...

The Kaiser Companies have gained worldwide experience in the development of resources such as coal, iron ore, bauxite, nickel, limestone and many other raw materials. Because of this experience, and because the name Kaiser Coal did not truly reflect our capabilities and enthusiasm, we've changed our name to Kaiser Resources Ltd.

Not that we didn't enjoy an exciting first year as Kaiser Coal. In early 1968, we signed a contract with the Japanese steel industry for the export of more than 45 million long tons of British Columbia coal, over the next 15 years. Since then, contracts have been signed for substantial additional shipments of coal to Japan

This new export business for Canada was made possible by the cooperation and encouragement of many groups in Canada, including both the British Columbia government and the Federal governmentbut without subvention or subsidy of any kind. As a result of these combined efforts, the following actions are taking place: Total direct investment necessary to build the new mine, railroad and port facilities needed to meet these commitments, has been estimated at more than $150 million of expenditures by Kaiser, the railroads and others involved in the venture.

Some 800 Canadian construction workers are building our new mining facilities in the East Kootenay Mountains near Fernie, B.C. Annual payroll for these workers, along with our 625 current coal production employees, exceeds $11

By the time major shipments are started in 1970, 800 full-time employees will be provided steady employment in producing the coal with an annual payroll estimated at

Major changes and improvements in housing, community and living conditions have already been made in the communities of Michel. Natal, and Sparwood, B.C.

We already have plans underway for a full-scale program for the reclamation of areas involved in surface mining. As part of our conservation efforts, we have established a scholarship program for research at the University of British Columbia.

A major program is underway to develop better methods of underground mining, including hydraulic and longwall mining, under safe and clean conditions. These new techniques could greatly extend the reserves of mineable coal.

Early next year, the Canadian Pacific Railway will be running round-the-clock unit-train operations to haul coal from the mine to a new superport being built at Roberts Bank near Vancouver. This will be one of the most efficient railroad operations in the entire world and Roberts Bank will provide North America's finest bulk handling port, capable of loading the mammoth superships needed to transport the coal to Japan.

We feel fortunate to be participating in this exciting project. The whole venture should prove to be a source of tremendous revenue to Canada. We also feel that there are many other growth opportunities to match the skills of the Canadian people with available resources and, as Kaiser Resources Ltd., we are building an organization of Canadians to meet these opportunities. Our worldwide experience has shown us that the development of resources can make a substantial contribution to the welfare of the people of the countries where the raw materials are produced. Wherever economically possible these products are processed in the countries where they are mined.

The Kaiser Companies have always been guided by two maxims. They may seem merely old-fashioned platitudes to others; but they have worked for us time and time again. The first is: "Find a Need and Fill It." As our world grows smaller, its needs grow larger. We feel confident that working with the resources and people of this country, we can compete in the global markets of tomorrow and help Canada to grow and prosper.

The second Kaiser maxim is: "Together We Build."

About 55 companies now are listed on the interim board and the exchange listing committee has another 20 to 25 applications on hand awaiting final processing with additional applications coming in daily.

"We expect to process quite a week Stuart Thompson, executive assistant to the president of the firms exchange, said Monday. "Meetof the listing committee are being accelerated. We'll be pressed for a few days."

Before the interim board was introduced in February, over-the-counter market included some 200 stocks, made up almost entirely of mining company issues.

PRESENTED PROBLEM

Trade in unlisted stocks has been a problem for brokers and for the British Columbia Securities Commission for several years because it is difficult to regulate.

Brokerage offices were not staffed or equipped to provide an active, fluid market in unlisted shares. To ease the situation, the Vancouver exchange provided an unlisted board on which bid and asked quotations for unlisted issues were chalked up.

Swift says...

"Being a gourmet is just a matter of good taste"

Here's how

Some people think that to be a gourmet you have to like to cook and serve very complicated dishes. That isn't true at all! You just need a taste for the finest... like the finest meats, prepared by Swift... and a little flair in the serving.

Lazy Maple Corn Bake

Open 1 lb. Swift's Lazy Maple Bacon, and partly cook half the bacon slices in a fry pan. Remove. Add the rest of the bacon cut into 1 inch pieces and fry with ¼ cup each chopped onions, green pepper and celery, until all are cooked (don't let the vegetables get mushy). Remove from fry pan and combine with one 12 oz. can kernel corn, one 14 oz. can cream-style corn, ½ cup cracker crumbs, ¾ cup milk. Pour into buttered 1½ ct. casserole, Bake at 375°F. for 15 min. Top with bacon slices and cook 10 min. longer. Serves 4-6.

We've used Swift's Lazy Maple Bacon because it adds a special taste to any dish. The secret is its deep maple sugar cure!

Swift's Cold Meat Treat

Just put out a platter of Swift's Premium Cold Sliced Meats and stand back while the crowd digs in! We've included Cold Sliced Ham (and some Swiss cheese for those favourite sandwiches), Bologna, Luncheon Loaf, Salami and Macaroni & Cheese Loaf... some olive and onion garnishes, and a few wedges of melon for eye and taste appeal.

Swift's Premium Cold Sliced Meats come in 33 varieties the choice is yours. They're all prepared according to oldfashioned country recipes. What makes them modern is the way they're sliced and sealed in a flash to make sure they're fresh—always—at your store!

Apricot Glazed Prem Loaf

Mash $\frac{1}{2}$ cup apricot jam with 3 tbsp. brown sugar and 2 tbsp. fruit juice. Score two 12 oz. loaves Swift's Premium Prem as for ham and spike with cloves. Spoon glaze over loaves and bake 45 min., basting with glaze frequently, at 325°F.

Prem lends itself to the gourmet touch in so many ways. And it's always so handy, in its bright red can. Even better, it tastes great because it's made with pork and the added touch of real lean beef...plus blend of spices.

Swift's, Swift's Premium and Prem are registered trade marks of Swift Canadian Co., Limited

Price Going Down SWEDEN SUGGESTS PRO BOXING BAN

STOCKHOLM (UPI)-The government proposed a bill Monday to ban professional boxing in Sweden and predicted the measure would win approval.

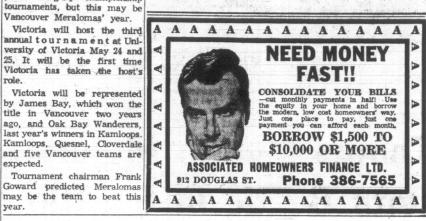

Under the bill, amateur boxing would be allowed if certain safety measures were implemented to protect the fighters.

Minister of Justice Herman Kling sent the proposed bill to the Law Council, where it will be checked before it goes to legislators for a decision later this year.

Kling said professional boxing should be outlawed as a health hazard and amateurs allowed to continue only under stiffer regulations.

Swedish amateur boxers have been using headguards in recent years. They would be forced to undergo stricter medical control and wait longer between fights.

Kling said the government might reconsider its decision to let amateur boxing continue if the new safety regulations were not followed or if the regulations did not "eliminate the health risks".

Game over!

The random, sometimes ngry, thoughts belong to angry, Dutch-born painter Will Julsing, 26. He is now a Duncan resi-

TOOK TO SIDEWALKS

A graduate of Artiebus and art academies in Holland, Julsing, a native of Groningen, "worked my way through landscapes and still but I didn't care for them. Luckily, the instructors thought it more important to design a painting than just to

It was sometimes difficult to leave a few coins for the tin cup for the next day as a come-on for further donations He visited Spain and North Africa, staying alive, travel-ling and learning.

SPORT TO FLIRT

"Sidewalk painting is illegal in Spain but like elsewhere I could always pick fruit," he says

A sign in the language of the country which read: "Help support a Dutch artist," always helped to keep the coins coming. Single and carefree (which he still is!). "it was a sport to flirt with every girl and not to hurt anyone."

Then in 1966 the devastating floods hit Florence and many of the world-treasured Italian art relics were damaged with mud and water. For food and lodgings he helped clean sculptures and move books and paintings.

"It was horrible, all that mud," he recalls. "Reminded me of a flood in Holland when a dike broke."

Back home in Holland he found slow acceptance modern art.

"They still revere Rem-randt and Vermeer and some paint factories thrive on exported Dutch landscapes,"

One Cradle' Theory Still Prevalent

(Special to the Times)

Some sciences, like physics and chemistry, are mathematically exact and leave little room for controversy and colliding conclusions. Other fields of research, like anthropology, which is the science of man and his behavior, are no less demanding in their requirements of the investigator, yet they do often leave ample room for conflicting theories and conclusions

A typical example is the old question of whether or not aboriginal civilization arose independently in America or was stimulated by some outside contact in the forgotten dawn of

There was a time when the teachings of the so-called Vienna School of "diffusionism" had a firm grip on anthropological thinking throughout the world.

Right into the 20th century it was a widely accepted theory that civilization had only one cradle, not too far from the Biblical lands, and from here culture spread across continents and oceans to every corner of the world wherever subsequently encountered by the Mediaeval explorers from Europe

Thus the existence of sun worship, pyramid-building, marriage between brothers and sisters in the royal families, mummification, and the art of hieroglyphic writing among the American high-cultures, were naturally seen as direct inheritance from ancient Egypt, and no ocean was considered wide enough to form a geographical barrier.

This theory of universal cultural "diffusion" was soon to vigoriously challenged by a rapidly growing group of more critical and exact American and European anthropologists who refused to accept any such theory without a proof.

New 'Unity of Minds' Theory

Gradually they became equally fanatically guided by another emerging doctrine: all cultural parallels could be ascribed to the unity of the human mind.

They justly pointed to the close mental and physical relationship between all subdivisions of the human family, which made men react in a similar way to the same outer challenge as long as the environmental conditions were alike. In other words, there was no need for the pyramid-builders of Mexico and Peru to have gotten their inspiration from across the ocean. After all, they had the same mind and body as the people of Egypt and could therefore have hit upon the same architectural ideas independently.

From now on modern anthropologists locked all gates to pre-Columbian America except the extreme Arctic north, and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans were considered total barriers to any human craft prior the birth the little and the columbian and the same architecture. to any human craft prior to the historic crossing of the three caravelles headed by Columbus.

This frequently publicized doctrine gradually became an Incontrovertible scientific axiom.

For this reason a storm of discussion arose among the cientists when the "Kon-Tiki" raft crash-landed in Polynesia in 1947 with all its crew alive upon a 4,300-mile drift from the coast of South America.

I had been challenged to undertake this practical demonstration to prove that it had been possible for the ancient civilizations of Peru to contribute to the original settling of Polynesia with the balsa log-rafts they had at their disposal.

So vigorous was the discussion now initiated that 15 more years would pass before 3,000 scientists assembed at the 10th Pacific Science Congress in Honolulu in 1961 unanimously accepted a resolution from the section of archaeology, stating that South America, in addition to Southeast Asia, constitutes a main source area of the peoples and cultures on the Pacific

Used Winds and Current

This concession only meant that limited groups of American aborigines had been able to leave their ocean-locked continent with the strong off-shore wind and current and settle on the nearest Pacific islands. Any pre-Columbian arrival to America, except in the extreme Arctic, was still considered impossible.

eonsidered impossible.

However, a group of rebellious anthropologists at the American Museum of Natural History in New York began to point out striking similarities between southern Asia and Mexico in pre-Columbian times. Other leading authorities at the United States National Museum in Washington pointed to archaeological discoveries in coastal Ecuador that indicated to them contact with ancient Japan.

The old banner of the Vienna School of diffusionism was hoisted once more by young anthropologists in various parts of the U.S., Asia, Europe and Africa, and the defenders of complete isolation found themselves on the defensive side.

All questions concerning man and his activities in aboriginal America are the topics of the International aboriginal America are the topics of the Congress of Americanists, which gathers anthropologists from all over the world when it meets every second year.

The controversial problem of "diffusion" versus was asked to invite the speakers and lead the session. It proved to be no problem to get scholars from all over the world who were prepared to read papers arguing transoceanic arrivals in pre-Columbian America. But in spite of all efforts, not a single scholar was prepared to present a paper summarizing the isolationist view with evidence in favor of independent evolution.

"isolation" in American anthropolgy had once more grown to such a prominence by 1966 that it was decided to make it the special subject of a symposium when the congress convened in Argentina that year.

The outstanding sensation of this congress became the illustrated reports by Dr. and Mrs. Helge Ingstad from Norway, who had excavated a Viking settlement at the northern coast of Newfoundland, showing that the early 11th century voyagers who colonized southwestern Greenland had also attempted to settle on the nearby American coast.

No Doubt About Settlers

The typical Viking house plan excavated, with the iron forge, iron nails, a Nordic spinning wheel and a whole series of radio carbon datings all coming out around year 1000 AD, left no doubt as to the identity of the Viking settlers, who had apparently come and left without causing any modification in the primitive surrounding American Indian cultures.

Not even the most conservative among the international group of leading anthropologists present disputed the fact that science was here confronted with tangible proof to the effect that at least the extreme North Atlantic had not constituted a complete barrier to pre-Columbian navigators.

However, the symposium led to no agreement as to whether the civilizations of the tropical regions of America had received impulses across the ocean, as the unsuccessful Viking attempt of settlement in the far north had evidently left no other traces in America than their abandoned ruins.

Leaving the congress, I had a strong feeling that neither the diffusionists nor the isolationists had succeeded in proving

As before, any cultural similarity pointed out by the diffusionists was claimed by the isolationists to be a good sample of independent evolution along parallel lines. Against this standard argument the diffusionist had no defence.

The vulnerable part of the isolationist position, however, was that he considered all burden of proof to rest on the

After this congress in Argentina I flew with the Ingstads and my wife to Lake Titicaca in Peru-Bolivia to visit once more the remarkable bundleboats of totora reeds which have navigated this stormy South American mountain lake since time immemorial. Their seaworthiness and carrying capacity struck me more than ever before as being quite astonishing.

Common Use in Ancient Egypt

At the congress I had quoted an isolationst who had pointed to their remarkable similarity to the specialized bundleboats of papyrus reeds which were in common use in ancient Egypt.

His conclusion was that, since nobody could have travelled from the Nile to Lake Titicaca, these peculiar reed-boats could be taken as proofs to the effect that even a remarkable analogy such as this had to be the result of independent inventions in two continents.

The same isolationist had committed one serious error

however.

He had overlooked the fact that similar bundleboats of reeds and canes were formerly not restricted to Egypt and this isolated South American mountain lake.

At the arrival of the Spaniards they were in common use along a Pacific coastline of some 4,000 miles from California to Chile, and also on a number of lakes in Mexico.

Moreover, their Old World counterparts were not restricted to the Nile, but were used from Mesopotamia through Ethiopia, Chad, Niger and coastal Morocco.

Morocco and Mexico were separated by nothing but a

Watching the masterly designed shapes of these corn-golden reed boats which proudly rode the rugged waters of the lake as silent messengers of the past, it struck me that they poorly served to demonstrate isolation.

constantly westward-moving ocean current.

Was there anything that could prevent such an ingeniously constructed bundleboat from drifting with the permanently westbound ocean current from the coast of northern Africa to the tropic areas around the Mexican Gulf? I could no longer rid myself of the suspicion that the key to the whole problem might be the hitherto unexamined seaworthiness of such a pre-Columbian type of bundleboat. And until I knew its true seagoing qualities, I would hesitate to side either with the isolationists or the diffusionists in the complicated discussion of whether there had ever taken place any transatlantic voyages to tropic America in pre-Columbian times constitute an adequate proof of isolation, and he made no effort to muster evidence in support of his own position.

District Board Faces Difficult Decisions

By JIM HUME

A compromise proposal to settle the Victoria area extended care hospital bed controversy has been received from Dr. Harvey Agnew Agnew was the co-author of the Agnew-Peckham report on hospitals and health services made public

The Regional Hospital District Board will vote on his latetst recommendations Wednesday afternoon.

The controversy Agnew was called to mediate flared April when the board was informed that its advisory subcommittee recommended a complete departure from Agnew's original 200 extendedcare beds recommendation for St. Mary's Priory.

The subcommittee trimmed the Priory allocation to 50 beds and suggested 150 new beds be built adjoining Jubilee Hospital.

That debate ended with the decision to write Agnew asking for his opinion on the switch from his original recommendation-a recommendation endorsed on three occasions in 1968 by earlier

His reply Monday suggested an increase in the Priory allocation from 50 to 75 beds while going ahead with the 150 beds for Jubilee. A further 150 beds are allocated for St. Joseph's when that hospital decides where it will build its new plant.

As it stands at this time the bed allocations now being recommended are: Gorge Road Hospital, 150 beds; Jubilee, 150; St. Joseph's (or Mount St. Mary), 150; St. Mary's Priory, 75; a new Peninsula Hospital, 75, and Lady Minto, Ganges, 15, for a total of 615 beds. Much Opposition

Backing the recommenda-tion to switch extended-care beds to acute-care locations were local hospital consultant Andrew Pitkethley and advisory committee chairman Dr. A. C. Pickles, administrator of Jubilee.

tion to attach extended-care beds to acute-care centres are several hospital administrators in the area, the bulk of the registered nurses in Greater Victoria, and many private · citizens involved i volunteer work in the extendedcare field.

Hanging over Wednesday's deliberations also will be a federal government deadline which espires March 31, 1970. After that date federal government grants for capital in the hospital field will be eliminated

In the past, the federal government grant has worked out at approximately $2,000 a bed. Hospitals under construction before March 31 next year will qualify for the grant. Construction started after that date will not qualify.

Pickles and Pitkethley contend that by building extendedcare hospitals close to acutecare centres the taxpayer can be saved a great deal of money in operating costs.

Best in Care

They say close proximity to an acute-care centre is essential if patients are to get the best in medical care and the best use of modern medical equipment.

Other advantages listed are:

- Sharing of such facilities as laundry, kitchen, administrative and physiotherapy
- . An easing of the burden of visiting physicians.
- Ease of access for visiting relatives. · Availability of staff and
- easier provision of staff accommodation. • Virtual elimination of transportation problems when a patient is moved from acute
- extended care.

 Both men point to successful operation of extended-care units attached to acute-care hospitals in Ontario and

Alberta. Opponents to the theory that extended-care beds are better attached to acute-care hos pitals note that extended-care hospitals in Alberta while close to acute-care hospitals are separate entities and stered independently. And they note that the patient in an Ontario extended care hospital has an average stay of 56 days as compared with the two, three or five years regarded as normal at St. Mary's Priory.

Registered nurses in the area argue that the medical profession has traditionally shown little interest in the real meaning of extended care

ANDREW PITKETHLEY

DR. A. C. PICKLES . . . and so is he

They back their claim with heavy documentation.

And they point to St. Mary's Priory as the only hospital in the region with a highly successful extended care program for the aged. "At Gorge Road Hospital we have an excellent unit for the purpose it is designed to says one nurse requesting anonymity because she works in one of the major acute care centres in Victoria "But it does not cater to old people who, having lost touch with reality, have become fearful and afraid of life itself.

"Surely a modern society can make some provision, some better provision than we have made in the past, for the

The battle of extended care beds has become a battle of interpretation of the phrase Some doctors and some administrators interpret extended care as they do in Ontario — a 56-day stay or

Other doctors, and people involved in the care of the aged, insist that extended care must apply in the long-term

Total Regression

"In the past the philosophy of the care of the aged was primarily that of custodial care," says Mrs. Mary McIver, director of hospital services at the Priory. "Patients were given shelter, a dry bed and they were fed three times a day. But their spirit was generally neglected.

"They were allowed to sit by their beds deteriorating mentally and physically until total regression set in. The patient becomes indifferent to food with such treatment, he becomes too weak to walk becomes incontinent and gradually loses touch with reality to live in a world of

"Pride and human dignity becomes lost and the patient is on a downward spiral toward complete dependence." Little more than two years ago, St. Mary's Priory was well acquainted with custodial, terminal care. So well acquainted that the elderly sick, the senile and the whether in acute care hospitals or the home, were referred to as "ready for the But Mary McIver didn't believe in that type of extend-

She believed that "the identity of a human being is his most precious possession. Rob him of his identity and you rob him of his birthright."

And she believed that the human mind could, in most cases, retain its identity until the end - if fostered with love and care.

Big Change Made

In 1967 only 7 per cent of the patients at the Priory were able to use the dining room facilities. Eight months later Mrs. McIver and her staff had the dining-room occupancy up to 90 per cent. It remains at that level in

In 1967 only 5 per cent of the patients would leave their rooms to socialize. Today 90 per cent are up and about, bowling, working in a small garden, sewing or making cakes and pastry Two years ago only 3 per cent of Priory patients could care for themselves. Eight months later the percentage was up to 20 and is still

The provincial government says "it has been clearly demonstrated that putting elderly or disabled patients to bed, or locating them in an institution where they are the passive recipients of complete care, will very quickly lead to further physical and mental deterioration.

"Since the majority of patients admitted to an ex-tended-care hospital will spend the remainder of their lives in this institution, it is essential that this facility provides a social, recreational, diversional and habilitative program.'

'Concrete Block'

And nurses pose the question: "Can a concrete block wedged between Jubilee and Eric Martin Institute provide the services required to make the declining years of men and women the golden years they have a right to enjoy?" In the past, the Victoria Medical Society has clamored for both extended and acutecare beds. Confronted daily with the critical bed shortage, its members have sometimes lost sight of long-range objectives in the desire to eliminate the immediate crisis. As a profession it hasn't an exemplary record when the issue at stake is the provision of extended care for the aged.

A recent survey of medical care for the aged, extended care as we say today, conducted by the University of California Medical Centre reported such care as characterized by "negativism, defeatism, and profes-sional apathy."

The nurses of British Columbia report that "a hospital in Vancouver has 56 extended-care beds situated on the top floor of an acute-care hospital and it is almost impossible to persuade the medical staff to use the elevator to visit extended-care patients, even infrequently."

Task Force Sought

More recently nurses called for a task force to "define patient care needs in extended care." And they added, "until doctors show more concern with nurses and work as a team to meet these needs the nurses' hands are tied."

Wednesday the regional directors face two tough decisions . They must decide on an extended-care construction pro-gram designed to end immediate bed needs and beat the federal grant cut-off date. They must decide just what they mean by "extended

DEAR ABBY . . .

Spouse Says 'No' To Sharing Him

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a husband who demands that his wife let him stay with another woman on weekends? He claims he is "indebted" to her because she was "good" to him when he was down in the dumps and having trouble at home.

That man is my husband. He is 60, and so is this other woman. He claims there is no sex involved—just friendship. When he and I had a fight three months ago he left for a short time and admitted staying with her. Now he's back home again with a proposition. Weekends with her and week days with me.

What do you think?-Also

DEAR ALSO: If you go for this proposition, your weak end is your head. Tell your husband that marriage is a full-time deal, and there's no time off for good behavior. Or

DEAR ABBY: Will you settle an argument for us? When somebody asks you for whom you voted, what should you say? My friend says the person who is proud of his say for whom he voted. I say if you prefer not to tell, it doesn't necessarily mean you are ashamed of your choice What do you say?-Just Voted.

DEAR JUST: I say that one's choice in voting is a personal matter, and he should not feel obliged to disclose it. It has nothing to do with being "proud" or "ashamed"—it's a matter of

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a pickup truck. It's my only means of transportation. keep it nice and clean and polished and attempt to use it for dates. I said "attempt" to use because I've had several dates broken because I was going to use the truck. Two girls broke the date standing right beside it, before I could even open the door.

The odd part is that not one of these girls asked about my transportation when they accepted the date.

I dress well, and behave like a geritleman. I make a good salary, but instead of paying out for a new car I am saving for a mobile home. Should I quit dating until I farm?-Cape Kennedy, Fla.

DEAR CAPE: Your problem isn't wheels. It's your choice of girls. There are still plenty of girls around who would like to date a welldressed fellow who behaves as a gentleman. And they wouldn't mind being picked up in a pick-up truck either. Ask around.

Pots at a Premium In Party Equation

By PENNY SAVER

"This party is going to have one thing to recommend it," remarked Gladys as she mopped her brow in mock fatigue. "I am definitely going to get a new serving dish." Gladys" problem was a simple one: How to feed all the husbands and wives who work with her husband as quickly and competently as possible and still look her usual ravishing self. After deciding the menu and the most efficient way to serve it (as usual she chose a buffet) she had to decide how to make it. Since she only has X number of pots and will be serving around X plus five dishes she worked her whole plan of action out on paper beforehand. I arrived half way through with the final factor in her culinary equation (a recipe she found in one of my magazines) and had the fun of watching her re-juggle pots to allow for the sauce which needed a pot

Since many of the dishes Gladys will serve will have to wait in the warming oven while the rest of the dinner cooks she needed a serving dish that could take the heat. Because of this we headed for a store we knew sold lovely enamel ware but in the end she decided on something quite different.

The serving dish Gladys chose is shaped much like a saucepan and is part of a whole line of ceramic serving dishes that can stand the heat of an oven. One of the best things about this ovenware is the price — the most expensive piece was $9.95 and was a set of three square condiment dishes on their own wooden tray. The saucepan-casserole she chose is $6.50 and it has a lid. All the items are beautiful to look at as well for they are finished in a shiny glaze that is a deep golden shade flecked with brown.

Butter Dish with Style

Because they are so lovely and practical these dishes would make wonderful wedding gifts. For instance, there is a butter dish that comes with its own tray for $6.50. The dish has fairly deep sides. A butter knife with a handle matching the dark oiled wood of the tray fits into a small rounded block of wood on the tray which has a handle to make carrying easy.

The plain serving dishes are mostly oval in shape and begin at $2.95. For $6.95 there is a double-sided serving dish while one at $3.95 is divided into three like the foil plates TV dinners come in.

Dear Mrs. M. R.

This "slit detail" is very easy to achieve, especially if you decide upon it before you have cut your pattern. Simply cut a two-inch seam allowance the length of the desired shit instead of the usual %-inch. If you aren't sure just how high to make the slit, it is better to cut the seam extension higher than necessary, it can always be cut and stitched down further. This is really a "fun" detail to use on a coat. I have done it many times.

Her main concern as head of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities is "getting provincial marketing authority to market municipal debentures for the small municipalities."

What this means is establishment of a large, non-profit provincial agency to act as a broker for small towns. The province would sell debentures on behalf of the municipality and back them up, making investors less cautious about buying them.

"Small municipalities find it difficult if not impossible to market debentures," she said. Investors consider it too risky to sink money into small places like Ladysmith, for example. With every munici-pality issuing it's own debentures the market is flooded

Airline Stewardesses Smile But They Are Crying Inside

TORONTO (CP) - Many airline stewardesses are smiling on the outside, but crying the inside. Studies airborne personnel have found a great variety of problems that lead to unhappiness
"Stewardesses have their own special set of problems, many of them caused by the nature of their work-irregular hours and frequent absences from home," says Dr. James Carroll of Toronto. "It can make it difficult to go steady with a boy-friend." Dr. Carroll, an aerospace physician, is medical adviser to Air Canada flying personnel.

MORE PROBLEMS

A detailed medical study of Air France personnel showed more of their stewardesses suffering from emotional problems than male stewards and pilots. Dr. Claude Blanc, an Air Force psychiatrist who has kept records on the subject for five years, says the "psychiatric morbidity rate" for stewardesses is 20 percent compared to 10 per cent for Air France stewards and two per cent of their stewardesses, 151 have sought help for emotional problems.

Dr. Blanc says one of the main causes is that many stewardesses start their careers when they are still at the adolescent stage. "The aviation career chosen by these young women is merely an intermediary stage in their existence, since the regulations limit their period of activity," Dr. Blane writes.

"This interlude coincides with the difficult period of transition from adolescence adulthood."

solutions for problems of women in their 20s and 30s, Dr. Blanc says. He says this includes love, fulfillment, work adjustments and future work prospects. He says they face a form of depression called the "gloomy years" syndrome when they approach the age of compulsory retirement. Most Air France stewardesses with emotional problems recover with the help of drugs and psycho-therapy, but Dr. Blanc says future job security is the best

Saanich Housing Up in Air

A meeting of the B.C. Housing Management Commission Monday ended inconclusively.

It followed the rejection by Saanich of three private pro-posals for building a 90-unit senior citizens residence near Hampton Park. Saanich council, at a closed meeting eight days ago, felt the proposals were not good enough.

Commission chairman J. E. Brown said this morning "nothing concrete" came from Monday's meeting.

Asked if there will be more meetings he said "I don't know at this moment." He also said there were "no particular decisions" made at the meeting. Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said those attending the meeting 'reviewed the next steps" and discussed two or three alternatives but he declined details.

The problem facing the authorities is whether to put out another call for proposals or switch and call for tenders.

The big difference between is that a call for porposals is general in nature, resulting in subjective consideration of each response. A tender call is based on a specific document and, subject to the bid being complete, is awarded to the lowest tend-at the corner of Hampton, Seaton and Lurline.

Seaton and Lurline.

The three proposals Saanich received, and which Mayor Curtis said "did not measure up Curtis said "did not measure up drinking before curt becan to what we had in mind," were $518,057, $649,000 and $653,139. Capital cost is met 75 per cent by the federal government and 25 per cent by the provincial government. Any operating deficit will be met 75 per cent by the federal government, 121/2 per cent by the provincial government and 121/2 per cent by the municipality.

It will be the first municipallysponsored senior citizens housing in Greater Victoria, although there are several sponby non-profit private groups.

Negroes Threaten To Close College

SEATTLE (AP) — The Black Student Union threatened Monday to close the 13,000-student Seattle Community College Thursday by "all action necessary" if certain demands are not met by Wednesday.

The college replied this was impossible and it would "take whatever steps it has to" if classes are disrupted,

A. Frank Williams, BSU chairman at the college, said his organization must receive a written guarantee by 10 a.m. Wednesday that a "full spectrum" of courses will be offered at the college's new central campus,

CANNES, France (AP)

There was polite applause from the black tie audience at the gala showing Monday night. But some critics felt the film was pompous and pretentious in its treatment of the generation

The critic for the newspaper Nice-Matin said it was the least interesting film presented so far at the festival. "To tell the truth, despite its laudable intentions, it left most people indifferent," the critic said.

It portrays the disintegration of a family in the face of outdated world values.

Produced in English, it will be shown with French sub-titles as Seuls les Enfants Etaient Presents. It will be released for ommercial distribution in fall. Don't Let The Angels Fall reolves around a triple generation gap among a student, his brother and his father.

A color photography enthusiast would find delight in a hummingbird dipping into gentian blossoms.

> How are earth phases seen from the moon?

The lunar phases, of course are daylight creeping across the side of the moon that faces our world. The series of changes takes about a month. Meantime the same sun is shining on the earth, on half its round globe at a time. This vision can be seen by an observer from our side of the moon. And it takes about a month for the earth to pass through its changing phases. The earth rotates through its day and night every 24 hours. You might think that it should take only 24 hours to show its changing phases to the moon But this is not so. Started Land Boom

In both cases the phases are linked to the motions of the moon and its changing positions in relation to the earth and sun. The cycles of the lunar orbit complete and repeat every month. Each cycle shows earth lings a series of lunar phase while an observer on the moon can watch a series of earth phases. The time period is the same but there are differences The two phases are reversed When we see the slim sliver of a new moon, the full earth phase shines in the lunar skies Our moon increases to its hall and full phases while the earth is shrinking through its third and fourth phases.

The lunar orbit, of course, cirles around the earth, Twice during each cycle the sun, moon and earth are more or less in line, with either the earth or the moon in the middle. When we are in the middle of the line-up, the dark side of the earth faces the moon. In the lunar skies, the old earth phase is a slim sliver at the edge of the globe. It dwindles away and soon a shiny sliver shows at the opposite edge. This is the new earth. Meantime the moon placed where sunlight falls full on the face turned toward us. Earthlings can gaze at the full moon. About two weeks later, the orbiting moon passes be tween us and the sun. Its dark side faces us and no sun shines on this surface. But now the sun shines full on the side of the earth facing to the moon. So the full earth shines in the lunar skies when the sun is not there ty-seven persons were injured Monday when a CNR passenger train from Campbellton, N.B. was derailed as it approached the station at St. Bruno, 20 miles east of here.

CN Passenger Train Jumps Tracks, 27 Hurt

CNR officials said it would take days to determine the cause of the accident at a level crossing. Three cars of the four-car train travelling 75 miles an hour left the tracks, reducing 400 feet of track to twisted steel.

A railway spokesman said none of the injuries appeared serious, but 27 of the 73 passen gers were taken to nearby hos for treatment. Others were treated on the spot for minor injuries.

Witnesses said the barriers at the level crossing were down as the Montreal-bound train proached the station at St Bruno more than an hour be hind schedule.

Three of the cars jumped the tracks and were left leaning precariously at the edge of ar embankment, while the diesel engine continued on toward the station, damaging another 300 feet of track.

Guards Kill Student in Escape Try

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (UPI)

A Wittenberg University student was shot and killed by a campus guard Saturday while attempting to escape after being found on a second-floor balcony of a girl's dormitory.

Wittenberg officials said John Lobach, 21, Bethlehem, Pa., had climbed to a third-floor balcony of the dormitory in an attempt to see a girl friend.

Campus guards Chester Phillips and George Lytle were called to the scene after authorfties were alerted by a coed, Amy Cunningham of Coral Gables, Fla., who saw Lobach climbing up the balconies.

The guards told police Lobach was ordered to the ground and Lytle went to call his superiors. The university has a rule that no arrests can be made by campus police without first advising the security chief or the school's business manager.

The officers said Lobach gave a false name and said he was a senior at Springfield high school, and was put in their car.
Phillips said Lobach jumped out of the car and ran. He said he shouted at him and fired a warning shot. Phillips, 48, said he then fired at the student's legs but the bullet struck Lobach in the back, university officials said. Phillips was suspended pend-ing an investigaton by the Springfield police department.

Union Spokesmen Reject Bus Report

By DON VIPOND

The suggestion that Vancouver Island is threatened by a second bus strike was rejected by a union spokesman in Vancouver today.

District Board Faces Difficult Decisions

By JIM HUME

A compromise proposal to settle the Victoria area extended care hospital bed controversy has been received from Dr. Harvey Agnew.

Agnew was the co-author of the Agnew-Peckham report on hospitals and health services made public

The Regional Hospital District Board will vote on his latetst recommendations Wednesday afternoon.

The controversy Agnew was called to mediate flared April 28 when the board was informed that its advisory subcommittee recommended a complete departure from Agnew's original 200 extendedcare beds recommendation for St. Mary's Priory.

The subcommittee trimmed the Priory allocation to 50 beds and suggested 150 new beds be built adjoining Jubilee Hospital.

That debate ended with the decision to write Agnew asking for his opinion on the switch from his original recommendation-a, recommendation endorsed on three occasions in 1968 by earlier subcommittees

His reply Monday suggested an increase in the Priory allocation from 50 to 75 beds while going ahead with the 150 beds for Jubilee. A further 150 beds are allocated for Joseph's when that hospital decides where it will build its new plant.

As it stands at this time the bed allocations now being recommended are: Gorge Road Hospital, 150 beds; Jubilee, 150; St. Joseph's (or Mount St. Mary), 150; St. Mary's Priory, 75; a new Peninsula Hospital, 75, and Lady Minto, Ganges, 15, for a total of 615 beds.

Much Opposition

Backing the recommenda-ion to switch extended-care beds to acute-care locations were local hospital consultant Andrew Pitkethley and adviroty committee chairman Dr. A. C. Pickles, administrator of Jubilee.

Against the recommendation to attach extended-care beds to acute-care centres are several hospital administra tors in the area, the bulk of Greater Victoria, and many private citizens involved in volunteer work in the extended care field. Hanging over Wednesday's deliberations also will be a federal government deadline which espires March 31, 1970. After that date federal government grants for capital construction in the hospital field will be eliminated.

In the past, the federal overnment grant has worked out at approximately $2,000 a bed. Hospitals under construction before March 31 next year will qualify for the grant Construction started after that date will not qualify.

Pickles and Pitkethley contend that by building extendedcare hospitals close to acutecare centres the taxpayer can be saved a great deal of

They say close proximity to an acute-care centre is essen-tial if patients are to get the best in medical care and the best use of modern medical

· An easing of the burden of visiting physicians.

• Ease of access for visiting relatives. · Availability of staff and easier provision of staff accommodation. Virtual elimination of transportation problems when a patient is moved from acute to extended care.

Both men point to successful operation of extended-care units attached to acute-care hospitals in Ontario and Alberta.

Opponents to the theory that extended-care beds are better pitals note that extended-care hospitals in Alberta, while close to acute-care hospitals, separate entities and administered independently And they note that the patient in an Ontario extended care hospital has an average stay of 56 days as compared with the two, three or five years regarded as normal at St. Mary's Priory, Registered nurses in the area argue that the medical profession has traditionally shown little interest in the real meaning of extended care.

ANDREW PITKETHLEY

They back their claim with heavy documentation. And they point to St. Mary's Priory as the only hospital in the region with a highly successful extended care program for the aged.

"At Gorge Road Hospital we have an excellent unit for the purpose it is designed to says one nurse requesting anonymity because she works in one of the major acute care centres in Victoria.

"But it does not cater to old people who, having lost touch with reality, have become fearful and afraid of life itself.

"Surely a modern society can make some provision, some better provision than we have made in the past, for the

The battle of extended care beds has become a battle of interpretation of the phrase. Some doctors and some administrators interpret extended care as they do in Ontario — a 56-day stay or

Other doctors, and people involved in the care of the aged, insist that extended care must apply in the long-term

Total Regression

"In the past the philosophy of the care of the aged was prmarily that of custodial care," says Mrs. Mary McIver, director of hospital services at the Priory.
"Patients were given shelter, a dry bed and they were fed three times a day. But their spirit was generally neglected.

They were allowed to sit by their beds deteriorating mentally and physically until total regression set in. The patient becomes indifferent to food with such treatment, he becomes too weak to wall bedomes incontinent and gradually loses touch with reality to live in a world of fantasy 'Pride and human dignity becomes lost and the patient is on a downward spiral toward complete dependence."

Little more than two years ago, St. Mary's Priory was well acquainted with custodial, terminal care. So well acquainted that elderly sick, the senile and the whether in acute care hospitals or the home, were

They went there to be kept warm and fed until they died. But Mary McIver didn't believe in that type of extended care.

She believed that "the identity of a human being is his most precious possession. Rob him of his identity and you rob him of his birthright."

And she believed that the human mind could, in most cases, retain its identity until the end - if fostered with love and care

Big Change Made

In 1967 only 7 per cent of the patients at the Priory were able to use the dining room facilities. Eight months later McIver and her staff had the dining room occupancy up to 90 per cent. It remains at that level in 1969.

In 1967 only 5 per cent of the patients whould leave their rooms to socialize. Today 90 per cent are up and about, bowling, working in a small garden, sewing or making cakes and pastry.

Two years ago only 3 per cent of Priory patients could care for themselves. Eight months later the percentage was up to 20 and is still

The provincial government says "it has been clearly demonstrated that putting elderly or disabled patients to bed, or locating them in an institution where they are the passive recipients of complete care, will very quickly lead to further physical and mental deterioration

"Since the majority of patients admitted to an extended-care hospital will spend the remainder of their lives in this institution, it is essential that this facility provides a social, recreational, diversional and rehabilitative program. 'Concrete Block'

And nurses pose the question: "Can a concrete block wedged between Jubilee and Eric Martin Institute provide the services required to make the declining years of men and women the golden years they have a right to enjoy?" the past, the Victoria Medical Society has clamored for both extended and acutecare beds. Confronted daily with the critical bed shortage, its members have sometimes lost sight of long-range objectives in the desire to eliminate the immediate crisis. As a profession their hands are far from clean when the issue at stake is the provision of extended care for the aged. A recent survey of medical care for the aged, extended care as we say today, conducted by the California Medical reported such care characterized by "negativisim, defeatism, and profes sional apathy."

The nurses of British Columbia report that "a hospital in Vancouver has 56 extended-care beds situated on the top floor of an acute-care hospital and it is almost impossible to persuade medical staff to use the elevator to visit extended-care patients, even infrequently."

Task Force Sought

More recently nurses called for a task force to "define patient care needs in extended care." And they added, "until doctors show more concern with nurses and work as a team to meet these needs the Wednesday the regional board directors face two tough decisions. · They must decide on an extended-care construction program designed to end immediate bed needs and beat the federal grant cut-off date. They must decide just what they mean by "extended

The suspicion at present is that most board members are not sure. Neither are the doctors, And neither is the board's consultant.

20 15 Total Sales: 4,483,633. Failure Rate For U.S. Tires

WASHINGTON (WP) - An 18 percent failure rate has been found in a sampling of tires tested for compliance with tested for compliance federal safety standards. The rate is disclosed in data from the National Highway Safety Bureau released by Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.). The tests were made on 176 sizes and brands produced by all 15 major tire manufacturers in U.S. Thirty-three tires from 10 companies failed to meet one or more standards.

The Rubber Manufacturers Association (RMA), however, has said that test data "can be misleading" about the number of defective tires in actual use. The RMA itself had set the standards before they were taken over almost intact by the safety bureau. The agency, a unit of the Department of Transporta-tion, then let contracts to determine whether sample tires complied with the standards, as their makers had certified.

The testing—done by independent laboratories between June and November of 1968was for endurance (freedom from blowouts or other failures for a prolonged period under load), high speed (freedom from failure at high speeds, strength (resistance to penetration), bead unseating (adherence to the rim), dimensions (absence of distortions in shape) and labeling (accuracy on information on the tires). The 'department persuaded two firms, Mohawk and General, to institute recall campaigns for 3 of the 33 tires that failed the tests and started legal action against them. In addition, the department started, in January, to test 1,900 tires as a result of the initial
